1. The specification at page 2 and line 21 makes reference to claim 1, which has been cancelled. Appropriate correction is required.
2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. Claims 14-17, 22, and 26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by U.S. Patent No. 6,644,055 to Ohta et al. Ohta et al is considered to disclose the claimed method of automatically switching off the engine 4 upon a release of a stop mode of an air conditioner which depends on the sensed interior temperature of the passenger compartment at 20. See especially 5, lines 55-64. Ohta et al inherently operates the automatic switch off of the engine in response to a defined variable time period between the sensed temperature and the desired set point temperature 21. The variable time period would inherently occur as a result of the time required for the A/C system to reach the desired set point from the sensed temperature.
4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claim 25 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Ohta et al in view of 6,978,634 to Aoki. Ohta et al discloses the claimed invention except for the multiple zones. Aoki teaches a vehicle A/C system which takes into account multiple interior zones. Thus, it would be obvious to modify Ohta et al so that multiple interior zones are conditioned, in view of Aoki, to yield the predictable result that different passengers can receive conditioned air at different temperatures.

6. Claims 18-21, 23, and 24 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
